Q: What is the proper syntax to call a method of a static class from a main method? I'm quite new to the Java language and I am trying to figure out the proper syntax to call a method of a static class that is declared in the main class. Here is the simplified code: Main.java public class Main { public static void main(String args[]){ SingletonInterface callAnotherSingletonInterfaceMethod(); System.out.println("End of Main"); } } SingletonInterface.java public interface SingletonInterface { void callAnotherSingletonInterfaceMethod(); Singleton.java public class Singleton implements SingletonInterface { public void callAnotherSingletonInterfaceMethod() { System.out.println("Singleton has been called");

Now when I compile this, the output is: main End of Main Singleton has been called and I don't know why. I thought it would simply execute the callAnotherSingletonInterfaceMethod() and print the same line. A: There's no need to call the interface method yourself, the compiler will implicitly do it for you (you should still have the method in the interface though). The call to the method is executed by the current class loader which is loaded in the context of the current class (the class in which you call the method). So for your example SingletonInterface.callAnotherSingletonInterfaceMethod() is executed because your Main.class is loaded and it has that method as a public static method. 76 B.R. 823 (1987) In the Matter of Joseph V.
